Gray Matters Brain Cancer Foundation

Each year 190,000 people in the United States will be diagnosed with a primary or metastatic brain tumor. But there is still NO CURE.

The 5-year survival rate for the most common type of brain cancer, glioblastoma, is only 4.5%. But there is still NO CURE.

The Gray Matters Brain Cancer Foundation was formed in 2010 in an effort to raise public awareness of brain cancers and help provide the critical research funding to those doctors who have committed their lives towards finding a cure.

Research Funding

We provide funding to researchers working toward finding a break-through in brain cancer diagnosis and treatment which will ultimately lead to a cure. We believe that research needs to be ”targeted” to provide the best opportunity for finding a cure. We realize that the medical community needs to better understand the causes of brain tumors in order to determine possible preventative measurers and discover new and improved treatment options, including both mainstream and integrative medicines. We will support health care professionals who are dedicated to these areas of research.

Public Awareness

We work to educate the public regarding the signs and symptoms of the disease, and current treatment options available. It is our goal that by increasing awareness, people afflicted with this disease will receive earlier diagnosis and in turn, achieve a better chance of survival.
